Dominic Bloomfield is an Afro-Caribbean multidisciplinary artist from Mandeville, Jamaica that specializes in acrylic paintings and illustrations, as well as graphic design. His work primarily highlights his experience as a black man touching on themes of colorism, afro-surrealism, and immigration, with the intention of carving out a space for other black people and immigrants to feel at home. His paintings, in juxtaposition to his illustrations, offer vibrant colors and warped anatomy and perspective against liminal and abstract backgrounds, which communicates a sense of playfulness that leaves the viewer filling in the pieces with their own experiences. Dominic's illustrations, which laid the foundation for his canvas work, consist of extremely detailed abstract geometric pen and ink drawings that serve to capture raw emotion with more of a focus on themes like mental health and the subconscious.
